Monday 4th September 1939

Dear diary,

I'm so sorry that I've not written to you for a few days. It's just that so much has happened here. I've barely had the time to digest my meals let alone chitter chatter with you!

Although I miss her dearly, in some ways it feels like years since Mother announced that we were to be evacuated. That ghastly train journey thankfully seems like a distant memory too! Mr and Mrs Farthing have been so kind to George and I and we've loved getting to help on the farm. Honestly though, it's still a shock to look out of the window and see green grass rather than a smog-filled London.

I'm not certain that the Farthing's two boys are terribly pleased to see us. They get up early to milk the cows and, when they return, barely say a word to us. George tried to get them interested in his picture books last night but they just looked at each other and laughed. I did feel sorry for our George and read an extra two books to him at bedtime to make up for it. By the time I had finished, my voice sounded like a frog and there was barely a wick left on the candle!

This morning, I overheard Mr and Mrs Farthing muttering about the war. I know that I shouldn't've been eavesdropping but we've barely had a scrap of news the whole time we've been here. Anyway, it didn't sound great. Initially, I had hoped that we would be back with Mother before the end of September but that might have just been a naive dream. My heart shattered when I thought about the possibility of spending Christmas away from her. Still, I shan't let George know.

I promise to try and write again tomorrow. Mrs Farthing is going to teach me how to make an omelette with the freshly collected eggs. I can't wait!

Eliza
